WELCOME AND ORIENTATION

LGEU addresses current thinking in relation to leadership, strategic planning and leading change in higher education. The 5 days of the programme combine theoretical presentations, open discussions, practical exercises, case studies and group activities, always in a peer-to-peer learning and internationally oriented mindset. In addition, the location of LGEU serves as the backdrop to expose participants to specific national and regional developments and site visits to other institutions offer first-hand knowledge of the perspectives and viewpoints locally.

These blended learning approaches allow participants to:

- gain new insights into higher education trends and practices in a wide range of countries
- explore various models for global engagement - at system, region and institutional levels
- share each institutions' responses to changes to national and international policy and
- review each other's institutional strategic plans and policy measures
- examine different conceptions of leadership and get a greater awareness of their
- preferred style of leading and working in teams
- build new institutional connections and develop a global network of higher education
- colleagues in similar leadership positions
